

List of Headstone Makers and Dealers:

Heber Jonathan Wagstaff of Charleston, Utah; Agent for Monumental Bronze Co of Bridgeport, Connecticut

Beesley Monument & Vault Co., of Provo, Utah, Thomas Beesley, proprietor.

Note: The earliest grave stones were hand-fashioned from the reddish cinnamon-colored sandstone quarry, owned by John Crook at the mouth of Lake Creek Canyon, east of Heber City.

Some gray Granite was taken from Pine Canyon, north of Midway and grave markers were carved from it; but it was found to be too coarse of grain, to support the carved letters etc in the granite.

Early on, there were a number of markers made of the white, marble-like stones taken from the face of the box canyon, called Snake Creek, west of Midway, by the Robey and Springer Families. Many such markers are found in the main Midway Cemetery.

There have been a number of other gravestones cut and shipped in from Salt Lake and Provo. They have a variety of color and texture of granite and marble. The origins of these are from as far away as the quarries of Vermont and New Hampshire.
